PREFACE

---

To Amalthæa, the nurse of his infancy, Zeus gave a magic horn of plenty, which by his grace was over-brimming no matter what was taken from it. This NEW EDITION of a standard work, like the famous cornucopia, contains a freshened and replenished store. In the garnering of this rich harvest of fruits culled from the vast fields of literature, tribute has been taken from every tree in our literary Eden, so that the reader may share in common with his fellow creatures, not only the kindly fruits of the earth, but also the golden apples plucked from the tree of the knowledge of good and of evil. Since divine discontent is wholesome, we may expect to find some apples of discord as well as of love, the apples of Sodom and of Cain, and a modicum of dead sea fruit. Something there will be of distasteful growth, but the weed's plain heart holds a secret though 'tis shallow rooted. Many a way-side flower in a crannied nook has carried a message to an humble heart, and because its bloom has attracted public attention, it warrants a place among the choicer blossoms in this horn of plenty filled for all sorts and conditions of men.

The effort of the compiler has been to make the collection the most complete that has ever been gathered within the covers of a book. There has been provided

"Fruit of all kinds, in coat Rough, or smooth rind, or bearded husk, or shell."

of which Milton sang in Paradise Lost.

In seeking enrichment of his own ideas, a speaker or writer is more concerned with the flavor and odor of the flower or fruit than with its progenitor, therefore the compiler, in gathering and preserving the "wisdom of the wise and experience of the ages," labels each specimen according to its quality (Topical arrangement) rather than source (Author arrangement).

The latter need is amply met by a biographical index wherein authors are paged. Thus like is with like, and an index to topics, with cross references, links up combinations of relating attraction.

The phrases which are "the parole of literary men the world over," form the basic value of the work. The compiler's blue pencil has hesitated over the prolific output of the "moderns," for public taste is fickle and what is popular to-day is padding to-morrow.

In these stirring times the press has teemed with utterances of prominent people, but records are inaccurate and unreliable, as has been tested through personal letters.

Locke states: "He that has but ever so little examined the citations of writers cannot doubt how little credit the quotations deserve where the originals are wanting; and consequently, how much less quotations of quotations can be relied on."

Many omissions may be accounted for by the fact that men of action often prefer the gold of silence to the speech of silver, but on the whole, the Biographical Index is a Who's Who of authors of all times.

It has not been easy to follow Dr. Routh's advice, "always to verify your references," for editions, texts and authorities differ. At times only a hint of an authority has been available, but rather than lose an item of value it has been deemed best to retain a meager suggestion in hope of future discovery.

It may be claimed for this work, without fear of contradiction, that no other of its kind contains so full an array of material under topics; none with such a representation of modern writers and speakers; no other includes such a record of modern war phrases, songs and poems; nowhere else are kindred thoughts and expressions so closely connected by cross references that they may be compared, and in no other collection of quotations have the nerves and arteries of the contents been laid open so plainly through so comprehensive and complete a concordance.

Topics have been chosen for their general character, so that similar ideas might not be too widely separated, which is a fault of too detailed subdivision.

The compiler takes comfort in the words of Cotton Mather: "Reader, Carthage was of the mind that unto those three things which the ancients held to be impossible, there should be added this fourth; to find a book without Erratas. It seems the hands of Briareus and the eyes of Argus will not prevent them."

Whatever degree this work has attained in the achievement of the impossible, it owes to MR. LEANDER J. DEBEKKER, the Briareus and Argus of the printed page and its literary contents. Appreciation and gratitude are but feebly expressed in this tribute to his services.

Acknowledgment is due to MESSRS. HARPER & BROS. for permission to use the lines written by Peter Newell found on pages 280 and 538.

KATE LOUISE ROBERTS.

PLAN OF THE BOOK, AND DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT

The reader is reminded that this work is a book of literary gems selected with a view to their usefulness in suggesting ideas for practical application in literary composition and not a mere collection of familiar quotations to serve as a remembrancer to such as may wish to refresh their memories. Therefore, quotations drawn from standard authors and familiar in our mouths as household words, have not been included because concordances of the works of these authors already exist. Every student of Shakespeare should know of the concordances to Shakespeare, Wordsworth, and other poets.

The quotations are arranged under topics according to their general meaning, sense, or idea. The topics are in alphabetical order, as are the authors under the topics. An Index to Topics, with cross reference to kindred ones, will be found on page xi.

The Concordance at the end of the book is a word-index of the text of each quotation. Identifying words are generously indexed, so that the lines may be traced through several channels in case the memory fails in exact reading. Enough of the context is given to identify the lines. After each excerpt the page and numerical order on the page is noted.

The Biographical Index is a record of men and women of all ages and nationalities whose words, thoughts, and visions have been passed along into the minds and speech of the people. Under each author's full name is given his nationality, dates of birth and death (L for living), also a brief character sketch, and the numbers of the pages whereon his lines appear.

To find an appropriate quotation for a definite subject, turn to a topic dealing with such an idea, and consult the Topical Index for related headings.

For the exact text of a quotation, or its authority, consult the Concordance. When exact words are not remembered try synonymous ones, or topics on such subjects. If the author alone is remembered, consult the Biographical Index.

When a topic does not give all that may be sought on a subject, consult the Concordance as quotations may contain, as a whole, ideas which have placed them elsewhere.

When quotations from a special author only are desired, consult the Biographical Index where pages are given on which are found that author's lines.

When modern authors are wanted, choose from the Biographical Index, according to dates given of birth and death.

To find priority of authorship, consult Biographical Index for dates of authors' birth and death.

The plays and poems of Shakespeare and the books of the Bible are given in italics without the names of the authors.

Full names of well-known authors are often omitted.

Popular abbreviations and pen-names are given when established as better known to the public. (Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde, George Eliot, Artemus Ward.) The Biographical Index supplies full names and has ample cross references.

ACTING; THE STAGE (See also WORLD)

Farce follow'd Comedy, and reach'd her prime, In ever-laughing Foote's fantastic time; Mad wag! who pardon'd none, nor spared the best,

And turn'd some very serious things to jest. Nor church nor state escaped his public sneers, Arms nor the gown, priests, lawyers, volunteers; "Alas, poor Yorick!" now forever mute! Whoever loves a laugh must sigh for Foote. We smile, perforce, when histrionic scenes Ape the swoln dialogue of kings and queens, When "Chrononhotonthologos must die," And Arthur struts in mimic majesty.

BYRON—Hints from Horace. L. 329.

As good as a play.

Saying ascribed to CHARLES II. while listening to a debate on Lord Ross's Divorce Bill.

There's hardly one (I may say none) who stands the Artist's test.

The Artist is a rare, rare breed. There were but two, forsooth,

In all me time (the stage's prime!) and The Other One was Booth.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE—The Other One was Booth.

I think I love and reverence all arts equally, only putting my own just above the others; because in it I recognize the union and culmination of my own. To me it seems as if when God conceived the world, that was Poetry; He formed it, and that was Sculpture; He colored it, and that was Painting; He peopled it with living beings, and that was the grand, divine, eternal Drama.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN.

See, how these rascals use me! They will not let my play run; and yet they steal my thunder.

JOHN DENNIS—See Biographia Britannica. Vol. V. P. 103.

Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks: Plays are like suppers; poets are the cooks. The founder's you: the table is this place: The carvers we: the prologue is the grace. Each act, a course, each scene, a different dish, Though we're in Lent, I doubt you're still for flesh.

Satire's the sauce, high-season'd, sharp and rough.

Kind masks and beaux, I hope you're pepper-proof?

Wit is the wine; but 'tis so scarce the true Poets, like vintners, balderdash and brew. Your surly scenes, where rant and bloodshed join.

Are butcher's meat, a battle's sirloin: Your scenes of love, so flowing, soft and chaste, Are water-gruel without salt or taste.

GEORGE FARQUHAR—The Inconstant; or, The Way to Win Him. Prologue.

Prologues precede the piece in mournful verse, As undertakers walk before the hearse.

DAVID GARRICK—Apprentice. Prologue.

Prologues like compliments are loss of time; 'Tis penning bows and making legs in rhyme.

DAVID GARRICK—Prologue to Crisp's Tragedy of Virginia.

On the stage he was natural, simple, affecting, 'Twas only that when he was off, he was acting.

GOLDSMITH—Retaliation. L. 101.

Everybody has his own theatre, in which he is manager, actor, prompter, playwright, scene-shifter, boxkeeper, doorkeeper, all in one, and audience into the bargain.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE—Guesses at Truth.

It's very hard! Oh, Dick, my boy, It's very hard one can't enjoy

A little private spouting;

But sure as Lear or Hamlet lives, Up comes our master, Bounce! and gives

The tragic Muse a routing.

17
I have heard
That guilty creatures sitting at a play, speak.

Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness.

O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to

Which makes it tedious.

9 The play is done; the curtain drops,
Slow falling to the prompter's bell:

And, when he's laughed and said his say,
He shows, as he removes the mask,
A face that's anything but gay.

The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty, but kindly.

As You Like It. Act II. Sc. 3. L. 47.

13 All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,
Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,
In fair round belly with good capon lined,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,
Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,
His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Just what is it that America stands for? If she stands for one thing more than another, it is for the sovereignty of self-governing people, and her example, her assistance, her encouragement, has thrilled two continents in this western world with all those fine impulses which have built up human liberty on both sides of the water. She stands, therefore, as an example of independence, as an example of free institutions, and as an example of disinterested international action in the main tenets of justice.

WOODROW WILSON—Speech. Pittsburgh, Jan.

<sup>7</sup>
We want the spirit of America to be efficient;
we want American character to be efficient; we want American character to display itself in what I may, perhaps, be allowed to call spiritual efficiency—clear, disinterested thinking and fearless action along the right lines of thought.
America is not anything if it consists of each of us. It is something only if it consists of all of us; and it can consist of all of us only as our spirits are banded together in a common enterprise.
That common enterprise is the enterprise of liberty and justice and right. And, therefore, I, for my part, have a great enthusiasm for rendering America spiritually efficient; and that conception lies at the basis of what seems very far removed from it, namely, the plans that have been proposed for the military efficiency of this nation.

Around our pillows golden ladders rise,
And up and down the skies,
With winged sandals shod,
The angels come, and go, the Messengers of God!
Nor, though they fade from us, do they depart—
It is the childly heart
We walk as heretofore,
Adown their shining ranks, but see them nevermore.

I have no angels left

Heaven is pitched over you.

ANGLING (See also FISH)

A rod twelve feet long and a ring of wire,
A winder and barrel, will help thy desire
In killing a Pike; but the forked stick,
With a slit and a bladder,—and that other fine trick,

Which our artists call snap, with a goose or a duck,—

Will kill two for one, if you have any luck;
The gentry of Shropshire do merrily smile,
To see a goose and a belt the fish to beguile;
When a Pike suns himselfe and a-frogging doth go,

The two-inched hook is better, I know,
Than the ord'nary snaring: but still I must cry,
When the Pike is at home, minde the cookery.

BARKER—The Art of Angling. (Reprint of 1820 of the 1657 edition)

26
For angling-rod he took a sturdy oak;
For line, a cable that in storm ne'er broke;
His hook was such as heads the end of pole
To pluck down house ere fire consumes it whole;

This hook was bated with a dragon's tail,—
And then on rock he stood to bob for whale.

Fly fishing is a very pleasant amusement; but angling or float fishing, I can only compare to a

In genial spring, beneath the quivering shade,
Where cooling vapors breathe along the mead,

We may say of angling as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did";
and so, (if I might be judge,) God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.

Thus use your frog: * * * put your hook, I out at his gills, and then with a fine needle and silk sow the upper part of his leg with only one stitch to the arming wire of your hook, or tie the frog's leg above the upper joint to the armed wire; and in so doing use him as though you loved him.

O! the gallant fisher's life,
It is the best of any:

Only this,
Lawful is;
For our skill
Breeds no ill.

But content and pleasure.

For example, the tiny ant, a creature of great industry, drags with its mouth what-

<sup>19</sup>
There were giants in the earth in those days.
Genesis. VI. 4.

Antiquity, what is it else (God only excepted)
but man's authority born some ages before us?
Now for the truth of things time makes no alteration; things are still the same they are, let the time be past, present, or to come.

Those things which we reverence for antiquity what were they at their first birth? Were they false?—time cannot make them true. Were they true?—time cannot make them more true.

The circumstances therefore of time in respect of truth and error is merely impertinent.

<sup>10</sup> What plant we in this apple tree?
Sweets for a hundred flowery springs

When, from the orchard-row, he pours
Its fragrance through our open doors;
A world of blossoms for the bee,
Flowers for the sick girl's silent room,
For the glad infant sprigs of bloom,
We plant with the apple tree.

APPLE BLOSSOMS

Underneath an apple-tree
Sat a maiden and her lover;
And the thoughts within her he Yearned, in silence, to discover.
Round them danced the sunbeams bright,
Green the grass-lawn stretched before them
While the apple blossoms white
Hung in rich profusion o'er them.

WILL CARLETON—Apple Blossoms.

As evanescent too.

When May was a marvel of bloom,
I followed the busy bee-lovers
Down paths that were sweet with perfume.

APRIL

When April winds
Grew soft, the maple burst into a flush
Of scarlet flowers. The tulip tree, high up,
Opened in airs of June her multitude
Of golden chalices to humming birds
And silken-wing'd insects of the sky.

BRYANT—The Fountain.

5
Old April wanes, and her last dewy morn

Now the noisy winds are still;
April's coming up the hill!

Sudden sun and clatter patter!

There was King Bradmond's palace,
Was never none richer, the story says:
For all the windows and the walls

Windows of latten were set with glass;

It was so rich in many wise,
That it was like a paradise.

4 Therefore when we build, let us think that we build (public edifices) forever. Let it not be for present delight, nor for present use alone, let it be such work as our descendants will thank us for, and let us think, as we lay stone on stone, that a time is to come when those stones will be held sacred because our hands have touched them, and that men will say as they look upon the labor and wrought substance of them, "See! this our fathers did for us."

9 Now nature is not at variance with art, nor art with nature; they being both the servants of his providence. Art is the perfection of nature. Were the world now as it was the sixth day, there were yet a chaos. Nature hath made one world, and art another. In brief, all things are artificial; for nature is the art of God.

20 The perfection of an art consists in the employment of a comprehensive system of laws, commensurate to every purpose within its scope, but concealed from the eye of the spectator; and in the production of effects that seem to flow forth spontaneously, as though uncontrolled by their influence, and which are equally excellent, whether regarded individually, or in reference to the proposed result.

could view"—

when earth, shaking with horror, rung the passing bell for Deity, and universal nature groaned, then from the loftiest tree to the lowliest flower all felt a sudden thrill, and trembling, bowed their heads, all save the proud and obdurate aspen, which said, "Why should we weep and tremble? we trees, and plants, and flowers are pure and never sinned!" Ere it ceased to speak, an involuntary trembling seized its very leaf, and the word went forth that it should never rest, but tremble on until the day of judgment.

AUTUMN

15
Now Autumn's fire burns slowly along the woods,

And day by day the dead leaves fall and melt,
And night by night the monitory blast

Wails in the key-hole, telling how it pass'd

O'er empty fields, or upland solitudes,

Or grim wide wave; and now the power is felt

Of melancholy, tenderer in its moods

Than any joy indulgent Summer dealt.

O Autumn, laden with fruit, and stained
With the blood of the grape, pass not, but sit Beneath my shady roof; there thou mayest rest

And all the daughters of the year shall dance!
Sing now the lusty song of fruits and flowers.

O, it sets my heart a clickin' like the tickin' of a clock,
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock.
JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY—When the Frost is on the Punkin.

15
This sunlight shames November where he grieves
In dead red leaves, and will not let him shun
The day, though bough with bough be overrun.
But with a blessing every glade receives
High salutation.
ROSSETTI—Autumn Idleness.

16
The warm sun is failing, the bleak wind is wailing,
The bare boughs are sighing, the pale flowers are dying;
And the year
On the earth her deathbed, in a shroud of leaves dead,
Is lying.
Come, months, come away,
From November to May,
In your saddest array;
Follow the bier
Of the dead cold year,
And like dim shadows watch by her sepulchre.
SHELLEY—Autumn. A Dirge.

17
Cold autumn, wan with wrath of wind and rain,
Saw pass a soul sweet as the sovereign tune
That death smote silent when he smote again.
SWINBURNE—Autumn and Winter. I.

Autumn has come;
Storming now heaveth the deep sea with foam,
Yet would I gratefully lie there,
Willingly die there.
ESAIAS TEGNÉR—Fridthjof's Saga. Ingeborg's Lament.

<sup>1</sup>
How are the veins of thee, Autumn, laden?
    Umbered juices,
    And pulpèd oozes
Pappy out of the cherry-bruises,
Froth the veins of thee, wild, wild maiden.
    With hair that musters
    In globèd clusters,
In tumbling clusters, like swarthy grapes,
Round thy brow and thine ears o'ershaden;
With the burning darkness of eyes like pansies,
    Like velvet pansies
    Where through escapes
The splendid might of thy conflagrate fancies;
With robe gold-tawny not hiding the shapes
    Of the feet whereunto it falleth down,
    Thy naked feet unsandalled;
With robe gold-tawny that does not veil
    Feet where the red
    Is meshed in the brown,
Like a rubied sun in a Venice-sail.
FRANCIS THOMPSON—A Corymbus for Autumn.
St. 2.

Crown'd with the sickle and the wheaten sheaf,
While Autumn, nodding o'er the yellow plain,
Comes jovial on.

We lack but open eye and ear
To find the Orient's marvels here;
The still small voice in autumn's hush,
Yon maple wood the burning bush.

AVARICE

So for a good old-gentlemanly vice,
I think I must take up with avarice.
BYRON—Don Juan. Canto I. St. 216.
(See also MIDDLETON)

<sup>5</sup>
Avaritiam si tollere vultis, mater ejus est tollenda, luxuries.
If you wish to remove avarice you must remove its mother, luxury.
CICERO—De Oratore. II. 40.

<sup>6</sup>
Ac primam scelerum matrem, quæ semper habendo
Plus sitiens patulis rimatur faucibus aurum,
Trudis Avaritiam.
Expel avarice, the mother of all wickedness, who, always thirsty for more, opens wide her jaws for gold.
CLAUDIUS—De Laudibus Stilichonis. II.
111.

<sup>7</sup>
Non propter vitam faciunt patrimonia quidam,
Sed vitio cæci propter patrimonia vivunt.
Some men make fortunes, but not to enjoy them; for, blinded by avarice, they live to make fortunes.
JUVENAL—Satires. XII. 50.

Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.

Of which all old men sicken, avarice.

I. Sc. 1. (See also BYRON)

In my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands.
Macbeth. Act IV. Sc. 3. L. 76.

<sup>11</sup> This avarice
Strikes deeper, grows with more pernicious root.

<sup>12</sup> Desunt inopiæ multa, avaritiæ omnia.
Poverty wants much; but avarice, everything.
SYRUS—Maxims. 441.

AWKWARDNESS

<sup>13</sup> Awkward, embarrassed, stiff, without the skill
Of moving gracefully or standing still,
One leg, as if suspicious of his brother,
Desirous seems to run away from t'other.
CHURCHILL—Rosciad. L. 438.

<sup>14</sup> What's a fine person, or a beauteous face,
Unless deportment gives them decent grace?
Blessed with all other requisites to please,
Some want the striking elegance of ease;
The curious eye their awkward movement tires:
They seem like puppets led about by wires.
CHURCHILL—Rosciad. L. 741.

<sup>15</sup> God may forgive sins, he said, but awkward-ness has no forgiveness in heaven or earth.
EMERSON—Society and Solitude.

AYR (RIVER)

<sup>17</sup> Ayr, gurgling, kissed his pebbled shore,
O'erhung with wild woods, thickening green;
The fragrant birch and hawthorn hoar
Twined amorous round the raptured scene.
BURNS—To Mary in Heaven.

<sup>18</sup> Farewell, my friends! farewell, my foes!
My peace with these, my love with those.
The bursting tears my heart declare;
Farewell, the bonnie banks of Ayr.
BURNS—The Banks of Ayr.

We see their blossoms sweet and red.

BABYHOOD

Have you not heard the poets tell
How came the dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours?

Oh those little, those little blue shoes!
Those shoes that no little feet use.

Oh, the price were high

That those shoes would buy,

Those little blue unused shoes!

WILLIAM C. BENNETT—Baby's Shoes.

Lullaby, baby, upon the tree top;
When the wind blows the cradle will rock,
When the bough breaks the cradle will fall,
And down comes the baby, and cradle and all.

Said to be "first poem produced on American soil." Author a Pilgrim youth who came over on the Mayflower. See Book Lover, Feb., 1904.

Rock-bye-baby on the tree top,
When the wind blows the cradle will rock.
When the bough bends the cradle will fall,
Down comes the baby, cradle and all.

Old nursery rhyme, attributed in this form to CHARLES DUPEE BLAKE.

Sweet babe, in thy face
Soft desires I can trace,
Secret joys and secret smiles,
Little pretty infant wiles.

WILLIAM BLAKE—A Cradle Song.

How lovely he appears! his little cheeks
In their pure incarnation, vying with
The rose leaves strewn beneath them.
And his lips, too,
How beautifully parted! No; you shall not Kiss him; at least not now; he will wake soon—
His hour of midday rest is nearly over.

BYRON—Cain. Act III. Sc. 1. L. 14.

He smiles, and sleeps!—sleep on
And smile, thou little, young inheritor
Of a world scarce less young: sleep on and smile!
Thine are the hours and days when both are cheering
And innocent!

BYRON—Cain. Act III. Sc. 1. L. 24.

8

Look! how he laughs and stretches out his arms,
And opens wide his blue eyes upon thine,
To hail his father; while his little form
Flutters as winged with joy. Talk not of pain!
The childless cherubs well might envy thee
The pleasures of a parent.

BYRON—Cain. Act III. Sc. 1. L. 171.

There came to port last Sunday night
The queerest little craft,
Without an inch of rigging on;
I looked and looked—and laughed.
It seemed so curious that she Should cross the unknown water,

And moor herself within my room—

My daughter! O my daughter!

G. W. CABLE—The New Arrival.

Lo! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps;
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps;
She, while the lovely babe unconscious lies,
Smiles on her slumbering child with pensive eyes.

CAMPBELL—Pleasures of Hope. Pt. I. L. 225.

11

He is so little to be so large!

Why, a train of cars, or a whale-back barge

Couldn't carry the freight

Of the monstrous weight

Of all of his qualities, good and great.

And tho' one view is as good as another,

Don't take my word for it. Ask his mother!

EDMUND VANCE COOKE—The Intruder.

"The hand that rocks the cradle"—but there is no such hand.

It is bad to rock the baby, they would have us understand;

So the cradle's but a relic of the former foolish days,

When mothers reared their children in unscientific ways;

When they jounced them and they bounced them, those poor dwarfs of long ago—

The Washingtons and Jeffersons and Adamases, you know.

Ascribed to BISHOP DOANE—What Might

Have Been. A complaint that for hygienic reasons, he was not allowed to play with his grandchild in the old-fashioned way.

When you fold your hands, Baby Louise!

Your hands like a fairy's, so tiny and fair,

With a pretty, innocent, saintlike air,

Are you trying to think of some angel-taught prayer

You learned above, Baby Louise.

MARGARET EYTINGE—Baby Louise.

14

Baloo, baloo, my wee, wee thing.

RICHARD GALL—Cradle Song.

The morning that my baby came
They found a baby swallow dead,
And saw a something hard to name
Fly mothlike over baby's bed.

RALPH HODGSON—The Swallow.

16

What is the little one thinking about?

Very wonderful things, no doubt;

Unwritten history!

Unfathomed mystery!

Yet he laughs and cries, and eats and drinks,

And chuckles and crows, and nods and winks,

As if his head were as full of kinks

And curious riddles as any sphinx!

J. G. HOLLAND—Bitter-Sweet. First Move- ment. L. 6.

When the baby died,

On every side

Rose stranger's voices, hard and harsh and loud.

The baby was not wrapped in any shroud.
The mother made no sound. Her head was bowed
That men's eyes might not see Her misery.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON—When the Baby Died.

Suck, baby! suck! mother's love grows by giving:
Drain the sweet founts that only thrive by wasting!

O child! O new-born denizen
Of life's great city! on thy head
The glory of the morn is shed,

Here at the portal thou dost stand,
And with thy little hand
Thou openest the mysterious gate
Into the future's undiscovered land.

Oh! bless'd be that warning,
My child, thy sleep adorning,
For I know that the angels are whispering with thee.
SAMUEL LOVER—Angel's Whisper.

He seemed a cherub who had lost his way
And wandered hither, so his stay

One more bird-song the air will hold,
Somewhere, Somewhere.

BALLADS

8
I've now got the music book ready,
Do sit up and sing like a lady
A recitative from Tancredi,
And something about "Palpiti!"
Sing forte when first you begin it,
Piano the very next minute,
They'll cry "What expression there's in it!"
Don't sing English ballads to me!
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY—*Don't Sing English
Ballads to Me*.

The farmer's daughter hath soft brown hair

At country wakes sung ballads from a cart.
DRYDEN—Prologue to Sophonisba.

I knew a very wise man that believed that * * * if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation.

CROMARTY. Letters to the Marquis of Montrose. In FLETCHER'S Works. P. 266.

I love a ballad but even too well; if it be doleful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

BANISHMENT

The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide;
They, hand in hand, with wandering steps and slow,
Through Eden took their solitary way.

MILTON—Paradise Lost. Bk. XII. L. 646.

20
Had we no other quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all

Like a bold flood o'erbear.

Coriolanus. Act IV. Sc. 5. L. 133.

21
No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bar-dolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Fal-staff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being as he is old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack and banish all the world.

Banished?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;

A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word—banished?
Romeo and Juliet. Act III. Sc. 3. L. 47.

Africanus, and after him cometh Augustus the Emperor who evermore used the razor.

Through this fair land rejoice!

I must not say that she was true,
Yet let me say that she was fair;
And they, that lovely face who view,
They should not ask if truth be there.
MATTHEW ARNOLD—Euphrosyne.

<sup>22</sup>
The beautiful are never desolate;
But some one away loves them—God or man.
If man abandons, God himself takes them.
BAILEY—Festus. Sc. Water and Wood Mid-

Act III. Sc. 5.

Ye Gods! but she is wondrous fair!
For me her constant flame appears;
The garland she hath culled, I wear
On brows bald since my thirty years.
Ye veils that deck my loved one rare,
Fall, for the crowning triumph's nigh.
Ye Gods! but she is wondrous fair!
And I, so plain a man am I!
BERANGER—Qu'elle est jolie. Translated by
C. L. BETTS.

The essence of all beauty, I call love,
The attribute, the evidence, and end,
The consummation to the inward sense
Of beauty apprehended from without,
I still call love.

The might—the majesty of Loveliness?
BYRON—Bride of Abydos. Canto I. St. 6.

The light of love, the purity of grace,
The mind, the Music breathing from her face,

Her glossy hair was cluster'd o'er a brow
Bright with intelligence, and fair and smooth;
Her eyebrow's shape was like the aerial bow,
Her cheek all purple with the beam of youth,
Mounting, at times, to a transparent glow,
As if her veins ran lightning.
BYRON—Don Juan. Canto I. St. 61.

A lovely being, scarcely formed or moulded,
A rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded.
BYRON—Don Juan. Canto XV. St. 43.

11
She walks in beauty like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellowed to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.
BYRON—She Walks in Beauty.

No todas hermosuras enamoran, que algunas alegran la vista, y no rinden la voluntad.

there is a kind which only pleases the sight,
but does not captivate the affections.
CERVANTES—Don Quixote. II. 6.

Exceeding fair she was not; and yet fair

I pour into the world the eternal streams
Wan prophets tent beside, and dream their dreams.

Until she smiled on me:
Oh! then I saw her eye was bright,
A well of love, a spring of light.

The ladies of St. James's!
They're painted to the eyes;
Their white it stays for ever,
Their red it never dies;
But Phyllida, my Phyllida!
Her colour comes and goes;
It trembles to a lily,—
It wavers to a rose.
AUSTIN DOBSON—At the Sign of the Lyre.

DRYDEN—Ædipus. Act IV. Sc. 1.

Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the marsh and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,
Then beauty is its own excuse for being.
EMERSON—The Rhodora.

The beautiful rests on the foundations of the necessary.
EMERSON—Essay. On the Poet.

Who gave thee, O Beauty,
The keys of this breast,—

Thee knew I of old?
Or what was the service
For which I was sold?

Sith Nature thus gave her the praise,
To be the chiefest work she wrought,

To match the candle with the sun.

Fair are the flowers and the children, but their

BEE

<sup>23</sup>
The honey-bee that wanders all day long
The field, the woodland, and the garden o'er,
To gather in his fragrant winter store,
Humming in calm content his winter song,
Seeks not alone the rose's glowing breast,
The lily's dainty cup, the violet's lips,
But from all rank and noxious weeds he sips
The single drop of sweetness closely pressed
Within the poison chalice.

He heard the convent bell,
Suddenly in the silence ringing
For the service of noonday.

LONGFELLOW—*Christus. The Golden Legend.
Pt. II*.

The bells themselves are the best of preachers,
Their brazen lips are learned teachers,
From their pulpits of stone, in the upper air,
Sounding aloft, without crack or flaw,
Shriller than trumpets under the Law.
Now a sermon and now a prayer.

Pt. III*.

Bell, thou soundest merrily,
When the bridal party
To the church doth hie!

Bell, thou soundest solemnly,
When, on Sabbath morning,
Fields deserted lie!

LONGFELLOW (quoted)—Hyperion. Bk. III.
Ch. III.

It cometh into court and pleads the cause
Of creatures dumb and unknown to the laws;

And this shall make, in every Christian clime,
The bell of Atri famous for all time.

LONGFELLOW—Tales of a Wayside Inn. The Sicilian's Tale. The Bell of Atri.

1 Those evening bells! those evening bells!
How many a tale their music tells!

MOORE—Those Evening Bells.

2 Nunquam ædèpol temere tinnit tintinnabulum;
Nisi quis illud tractat aut movet, mutum est,
tacet.

The Bell never rings of itself; unless some one handles or moves it it is dumb.

PLAUTUS—Trinummus. IV. 2. 162.

3 Hear the sledges with the bells,
Silver bells!
What a world of merriment their melody foretells!
How they tinkle, tinkle, tinkle,
In the icy air of night,
While the stars that oversprinkle
All the Heavens seem to twinkle
With a crystalline delight:
Keeping time, time, time,
In a sort of Runic rhyme
To the tinkinnabulation that so musically wells
From the bells, bells, bells, bells,
Bells, bells, bells—
From the jingling and the tingling of the bells.

POE—The Bells. St. 1.

4 Hear the mellow wedding bells,
Golden bells!
What a world of happiness their harmony foretells
Through the balmy air of night
How they ring out their delight!
From the molten golden notes,
And all in tune
What a liquid ditty floats
To the turtle-dove that listens while she gloats
On the moon!
POE—The Bells. St. 2.

5 With deep affection
And recollection
I often think of
Those Shandon bells,
Whose sounds so wild would,
In the days of childhood,
Fling round my cradle
Their magic spells.
FATHER PROUT (Francis Mahony). The Bells of Shandon.

6 And the Sabbath bell,
That over wood and wild and mountain dell
Wanders so far, chasing all thoughts unholy
With sounds most musical, most melancholy.

7 And this be the vocation fit,
For which the founder fashioned it:
High, high above earth's life, earth's labor
E'en to the heaven's blue vault to soar.
To hover as the thunder's neighbor.
The very firmament explore.
To be a voice as from above
Like yonder stars so bright and clear,

That praise their Maker as they move,
And usher in the circling year.
Tun'd be its metal mouth alone
To things eternal and sublime.
And as the swift wing'd hours speed on May it record the flight of time!

SCHILLER—Song of the Bell. E. A. Bowring's trans.

8 Around, around,
Companions all, take your ground,
And name the bell with joy profound!
CONCORDIA is the word we've found
Most meet to express the harmonious sound,
That calls to those in friendship bound.

SCHILLER—Song of the Bell.

9 Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh.
Hamlet. Act III. Sc. 1. L. 166.

10 Then get thee gone and dig my grave thyself,
And bid the merry bells ring to thine ear
That thou art crowned, not that I am dead.
Henry IV. Pt. II. Act IV. Sc. 5. L. 111.

11 Hark, how chimes the passing bell!
There's no music to a knell;
All the other sounds we hear,
Flatter, and but cheat our ear.
This doth put us still in mind
That our flesh must be resigned,
And, a general silence made,
The world be muffled in a shade.
[Orpheus' lute, as poets tell,
Was but moral of this bell,
And the captive soul was she,
Which they called Eurydice,
Rescued by our holy groan,
A loud echo to this tone.]
SHIRLEY—The Passing Bell.

12 Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land;
Ring in the Christ that is to be.
TENNYSON—In Memoriam. Pt. CVI.

13 Ring out old shapes of foul disease;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.
TENNYSON—In Memoriam. Pt. CVI.

14 Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow.
TENNYSON—In Memoriam. Pt. CVI.

15 Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light.
TENNYSON—In Memoriam. Pt. CVI.

16 Softly the loud peal dies,
In passing winds it drowns,
But breathes, like perfect joys,
Tender tones.
FREDERICK TENNYSON—The Bridal.

17 Curfew must not ring to-night.
ROSA H. THORPE—Title of Poem.

<sup>1</sup>
How like the leper, with his own sad cry
Enforcing his own solitude, it tells!
That lonely bell set in the rushing shoals,
To warn us from the place of jeopardy!
CHARLES TENNYSON TURNER—The Buoy Bell.

Rippling through thy branches goes the sunshine,

Among thy leaves that palpitate forever,

The nightingale has a lyre of gold,

The lark's is a clarion call,
And the blackbird plays but a boxwood flute,
But I love him best of all.

For his song is all the joy of life,
And we in the mad spring weather,
We two have listened till he sang
Our hearts and lips together.

W. E. HENLEY—Echoes.

<sup>18</sup>
When the swallows homeward fly,
When the roses scattered lie,
When from neither hill or dale,
Chants the silvery nightingale:

When I thus thy image lose
Can I, ah! can I, e'er know repose?

BLACKBIRD

The birds have ceased their songs,
All save the blackbird, that from yon tall ash,
'Mid Pinkie's greenery, from his mellow throat,
In adoration of the setting sun,
Chants forth his evening hymn.
MOIR—An Evening Sketch.

Golden Bill! Golden Bill!
Lo, the peep of day;
All the air is cool and still,
From the elm-tree on the hill,
Chant away:

* * * *
Let thy loud and welcome lay
Pour alway
Few notes but strong.
MONTGOMERY—The Blackbird.

A slender young Blackbird built in a thorn-tree:
A spruce little fellow as ever could be;
His bill was so yellow, his feathers so black,
So long was his tail, and so glossy his back,
That good Mrs. B., who sat hatching her eggs,
And only just left them to stretch her poor legs,
And pick for a minute the worm she preferred,
Thought there never was seen such a beautiful bird.
D. M. MULOCK—The Blackbird and the Rooks.

While all the neighbors shoot thee round,

BLACKSMITH

Curs'd be that wretch (Death's factor sure) who brought
Dire swords into the peaceful world, and taught Smiths (who before could only make The spade, the plough-share, and the rake)
Arts, in most cruel wise

Come, see the Dolphin's anchor forged; 'tis at a white heat now:
The billows ceased, the flames decreased; though on the forge's brow
The little flames still fitfully play through the sable mound;
And fitfully you still may see the grim smiths ranking round,
All clad in leathern panoply, their broad hands only bare;
Some rest upon their sledges here, some work
the windlass there.

LONGFELLOW—The Village Blacksmith.

10
As great Pythagoras of yore,
Standing beside the blacksmith's door,
And hearing the hammers, as they smote
The anvils with a different note,

The secret of the sounding wire,
And formed the seven-chorded lyre.
LONGFELLOW—To a Child. L. 175.

To outward view of blemish or of spot,

Or man, or woman. Yet I argue not

BOBOLINK

Braggarts and prince of braggarts is he,
Pouring boasts from his little throat.

Books are delightful when prosperity happily smiles; when adversity threatens, they are inseparable comforters. They give strength to human compacts, nor are grave opinions brought forward without books. Arts and sciences, the benefits of which no mind can calculate, depend upon books.

RICHARD AUNGERVYLE (Richard De Bury)—
Philobiblon. Ch. I.

19
You, O Books, are the golden vessels of the temple, the arms of the clerical militia with which the missiles of the most wicked are destroyed;
fruitful olives, vines of Engaddi, fig-trees knowing no sterility; burning lamps to be ever held in the hand.

1 That place that does contain
My books, the best companions, is to me
A glorious court, where hourly I converse
With the old sages and philosophers;
And sometimes, for variety, I confer
With kings and emperors, and weigh their coun-

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER—The Elder Brother. Act I. Sc. 2.

2 We get no good
By being ungenerous, even to a book,
And calculating profits—so much help
By so much reading. It is rather when
We gloriously forget ourselves, and plunge
Soul-forward, headlong, into a book's profound,
Impassioned for its beauty, and salt of truth—
'Tis then we get the right good from a book.

E. B. BROWNING—Aurora Leigh. Bk. I. L. 700.

3 Books, books, books!
I had found the secret of a garret room
Piled high with cases in my father's name;
Piled high, packed large,—where, creeping in and out
Among the giant fossils of my past,
Like some small nimble mouse between the ribs
Of a mastodon, I nibbled here and there
At this or that box, pulling through the gap,
In heats of terror, haste, victorious joy,
The first book first. And how I felt it beat Under my pillow, in the morning's dark,
An hour before the sun would let me read!
My books!

At last, because the time was ripe,
I chanced upon the poets.

an excellent book (and the remark holds almost a well-chosen and well-tended fruit tree. Its fruits are not of one season only. With the due

BORROWING

<sup>9</sup> Great collections of books are subject to certain accidents besides the damp, the worms, the borrowers, not to say a word of the purliners.

MARTIAL—Epigrams. Bk. IX. Ep. 102.

<sup>12</sup> I have granted you much that you asked:

And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
Hamlet. Act I. Sc. 3. L. 75.

<sup>16</sup> What question can be here? Your own true heart Must needs advise you of the only part:
That may be claim'd again which was but lent,
And should be yielded with no discontent,
Nor surely can we find herein a wrong,
That it was left us to enjoy it long.

BOSTON

<sup>19</sup> The sea returning day by day
Restores the world-wide mart.

Or over the town blue ocean flows.

But made a trail all bent askew,
A crooked trail as all calves do.

And men two centuries and a half
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.
SAM WALTER FOSS—The Calf-Path.

<sup>21</sup> A hundred thousand men were led

They followed still his crooked way
And lost a hundred years a day;

Where roses and lilies and violets meet.
THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY—I'd be a Butterfly.
- <sup>11</sup>
Gray sail against the sky,
Gray butterfly!
Have you a dream for going.
Or are you only the blind wind's blowing?
DANA BURNET—A Sail at Twilight.
- <sup>12</sup>
With the rose the butterfly's deep in love,
A thousand times hovering round;
But round himself, all tender like gold,
The sun's sweet ray is hovering found.
HEINE—Book of Songs. New Spring. No. 7.
- <sup>13</sup>
Far out at sea,—the sun was high,
While veer'd the wind and flapped the sail,
We saw a snow-white butterfly
Dancing before the fitful gale,
Far out at sea.
RICHARD HENGIST HORNE—Genius.
- <sup>14</sup>
The gold-barr'd butterflies to and fro
And over the waterside wander'd and wove

Thou bring'st, gay creature as thou art!
A solemn image to my heart.
WORDSWORTH—To a Butterfly.

Prayer for Indifference.
- <sup>18</sup>
How calm, how beautiful comes on
The stilly hour, when storms are gone!
When warring winds have died away,
And clouds, beneath the glancing ray,
Melt off, and leave the land and sea
Sleeping in bright tranquillity!
MOORE—Lalla Rookh. Fire Worshipers. St. 52.
- <sup>19</sup>
'Tis Noon;—a calm, unbroken sleep
Is on the blue waves of the deep;
A soft haze, like a fairy dream,
Is floating over wood and stream;
And many a broad magnolia flower,
Within its shadowy woodland bower,
Is gleaming like a lovely star.
GEO. D. PRENTICE—To an Absent Wife. St. 2.

Nothing is so swift as calumny; nothing is more easily uttered; nothing more readily received; nothing more widely dispersed. CICERO—Oratio Pro Cnæo Plancio. XXIII.

CANARY

<sup>13</sup> Thou should'st be carolling thy Maker's praise,
Poor bird! now fetter'd, and here set to draw,
With graceless toil of beak and added claw,
The meagre food that scarce thy want allays!
And this—to gratify the gloating gaze
Of fools, who value Nature not a straw,
But know to prize the infraction of her law
And hard perversion of her creatures' ways!
Thee the wild woods await, in leaves attired,
Where notes of liquid utterance should engage
Thy bill, that now with pain scant forage earns.

JULIAN FANE—Poems. Second Edition, with Additional Poems. To a Canary Bird.

<sup>14</sup> Sing away, ay, sing away,
Merry little bird
Always gayest of the gay,

Though your life from youth to age
Passes in a narrow cage.
D. M. MULOCK—The Canary in his Cage.

<sup>15</sup> Bird of the amber beak,
Bird of the golden wing!
Thy dower is thy carolling;
Thou hast not far to seek Thy bread, nor needest wine
To make thy utterance divine;
Thou art canopied and clothed
And unto Song betrothed.
E. C. STEDMAN—The Songster. St. 2.

CARCASSONNE

<sup>16</sup> How old I am! I'm eighty years!
I've worked both hard and long,
Yet patient as my life has been,
One dearest sight I have not seen—
It almost seems a wrong;
A dream I had when life was new,
Alas our dreams! they come not true;
I thought to see fair Carcassonne,
That lovely city—Carcassonne!
GUSTAVE NADAUD—Carcassonne.

CARDINAL-FLOWER

Lobelia Cardinalis

what a sad old age you are preparing for yourself!

TALLEYRAND.

O insensata cura dei mortali,
Quanto son defettivi sillogismi
Quei che ti fanno in basso batter l'ali!

In sooth, doth all those syllogisms fill,
Which make you stoop your pinions to the earth!

DANTE—Paradiso. XI. 1.

<sup>6</sup>
For want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want horse-shoe nail.

I never do swing a cat. Therefore what does

Since the day I found thee out,
Little Flower!—I'll make a stir,

WORDSWORTH—To the Small Celandine.

2
Pleasures newly found are sweet

Celandine! and long ago,
Praise of which I nothing know.
WORDSWORTH—To the Same Flower.

'Tis from high Life high Characters are drawn;
A Saint in Crape is twice a Saint in Lawn:
A Judge is just, a Chanc'llor juster still;
A Gownman learn'd; a Bishop what you will;
Wise if a minister; but if a King,
More wise, more learn'd, more just, more ev'ry-thing.

Far from the valleys of Hall.

It was the calm and silent night!
Seven hundred years and fifty-three
Had Rome been growing up to might
And now was queen of land and sea.

In the solemn midnight,
Centuries ago.

Sometimes assist the savory chine;
From the low peasant to the lord,
The Turkey smokes on every board.

Ring out, ye crystal spheres!
Once bless our human ears,
If ye have power to touch our senses so;

clouds.
Troilus and Cressida. Act IV. Sc. 5. L. 220.

10 I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
From the seas and the streams;
I bear light shade for the leaves when laid
In their noonday dreams.

From my wings are shaken the dews that waken
The sweet buds every one,
When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,
As she dances about the sun.
I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
And whiten the green plains under,
And then again I dissolve it in rain,
And laugh as I pass in thunder.

Seats of the gods in the limitless ether,
Looming sublimely aloft and afar.
BAYARD TAYLOR—Kikimandjaro.

15 Yonder cloud
That rises upward always higher,
And onward drags a laboring breast,
And topples round the dreary west,
A looming bastion fringed with fire.

19 Crimson clover I discover
By the garden gate,
And the bees about her hover,
But the robins wait.
Sing, robins, sing,
Sing a roundelay,—
'Tis the latest flower of Spring
Coming with the May!
DORA READ GOODALE—Red Clover.

20 The clover blossoms kiss her feet,

CLYDE (RIVER)

23 How sweet to move at summer's eve
By Clyde's meandering stream,
When Sol in joy is seen to leave
The earth with crimson beam;
When islands that wandered far
Above his sea couch lie,
And here and there some gem-like star
Re-opes its sparkling eye.
ANDREW PARK—The Banks of Clyde.

COLOGNE

In Köln, a town of monks and bones,
And pavement fang'd with murderous stones,
And rags and hags, and hideous venches,
I counted two-and-seventy stenchs,
All well defined, and several stinks!
Ye nymphs that reign o'er sewers and sinks,
The River Rhine, it is well known,
Doth wash your city of Cologne;
But tell me, nymphs! what power divine
Shall henceforth wash the river Rhine?
COLERIDGE—Cologne.

With a running flame from ledge to ledge,
Or swaying deeper in shadowy glooms,

Maddening, gladdening every one
With a gypsy beauty full and fine,—
A health to the crimson columbine!
ELAINE GOODALE—Columbine.

That comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution;
That gentle physic, given in time, had cur'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here, but Prayers.
Henry VIII. Act IV. Sc. 2. L. 119.

And merry both night and day!
"Ma foi! I laugh at the world," says he,
"I laugh at the world, and the world laughs at

In a cottage I live, and the cot of content,
Where a few little rooms for ambition too low,
Are furnish'd as plain as a patriarch's tent,
With all for convenience, but nothing for show:
Like Robinson Crusoe's, both peaceful and pleas-

And the peer who looks down with contempt on a peasant.

Can ne'er be look'd up to with envy by me.

Sweet are the thoughts that savour of content;
The quiet mind is richer than a crown;

bliss,
Beggars enjoy, when princes oft do miss.

A man must serve his time to every trade
 Save censure—critics all are ready made.
 Take hackney'd jokes from Miller, got by rote,
 With just enough of learning to misquote;
 A mind well skill'd to find or forge a fault;
 A turn for punning, call it Attic salt;
 To Jeffrey go, be silent and discreet,
 His pay is just ten sterling pounds per sheet;
 Fear not to lie, 'twill seem a lucky hit;
 Shrink not from blasphemy, 'twill pass for wit;
 Care not for feeling—pass your proper jest,
 And stand a critic, hated yet caress'd.

Heard I that voice! and catch it now, though faint,
Far off and faint, and melting into air,
Yet not to be mistaken. Hark again!
Those louder cries give notice that the bird,
Although invisible as Echo's self,
Is wheeling hitherward.

This dance of death which sounds so musically
Was sure intended for the corpse de ballet.

O give me new figures! I can't go on dancing
The same that were taught me ten seasons ago;
The schoolmaster over the land is advancing,
Then why is the master of dancing so slow?
It is such a bore to be always caught tripping
In dull uniformity year after year;
Invent something new, and you'll set me a skip-

And then he danced;—all foreigners excel
The serious Angles in the eloquence
Of pantomime;—he danced, I say, right well,
With emphasis, and also with good sense—

What! the balm of her breath shall another man

What! pressed in the dance by another's man's knee?
What! panting recline on another than me?
Sir, she's yours; you have pressed from the grape its fine blue,
From the rosebud you've shaken the tremulous
dew;
What you've touched you may take. Pretty waltzer—adieu!

Such pains, such pleasures now alike are o'er,
And beaus and etiquette shall soon exist no more
At their speed behold advancing
Modern men and women dancing;
Step and dress alike express
Above, below from heel to toe,
Male and female awkwardness.
Without a hoop, without a ruffle,
One eternal jig and shuffle,
Where's the air and where's the gait?
Where's the feather in the hat?
Where the frizzed toupee? and where
Oh! where's the powder for the hair?

Once on a time, the wight Stupidity
For his throne trembled,
When he discovered in the brains of men
Something like thoughts assembled,
And so he searched for a plausible plan
One of validity,—
And racked his brains, if rack his brains he can None having, or a very few!
At last he hit upon a way
For putting to rout,
And driving out
From our dull clay
These same intruders new—
This Sense, these Thoughts, these Speculative ills—

What could he do? He introduced quadrilles.

DAY

3 Listen to the Exhortation of the Dawn!
Look to this Day! For it is Life,
The very Life of Life.
In its brief course lie all the Varieties
And Realities of your Existence;
The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendor of Beauty;
For Yesterday is but a Dream,
And Tomorrow is only a Vision;
But Today well lived
Makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,
And every Tomorrow a Vision of Hope.
Look well therefore to this Day!
Such is the Salutation of the Dawn.

He who died at Azan sends
This to comfort all his friends:
Faithful friends! It lies I know
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say, "Abdallah's dead!"
Weeping at the feet and head.
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your sighs and prayers;
Yet I smile and whisper this:
I am not the thing you kiss.
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine—it is not I.
EDWIN ARNOLD—He Who Died at Azan.

Her cabin'd ample spirit,

Tonight it doth inherit

Pompa mortis magis terret quam mors ipsa.
The pomp of death alarms us more than death itself.
Quoted by BACON as from SENECA.
(See also BURTON)

It is as natural to die as to be born; and to a little infant, perhaps, the one is as painful as the other.
BACON—Essays. Of Death.

Men fear Death, as children fear to go in the dark; and as that natural fear in children is increased with tales, so is the other.
BACON—Essays. Of Death.

What then remains, but that we still should cry
Not to be born, or being born to die.
Ascribed to BACON. (Paraphrase of a Greek Epigram.)

7
Death is the universal salt of states;
Blood is the base of all things—law and war.
BAILEY—Festus. Sc. A Country Town.

The death-change comes.
Death is another life. We bow our heads
At going out, we think, and enter straight Another golden chamber of the king's,
Larger than this we leave, and lovelier.
And then in shadowy glimpses, disconnect,
The story, flower-like, closes thus its leaves.
The will of God is all in all. He makes,
Destroys, remakes, for His own pleasure, all.
BAILEY—Festus. Sc. Home.

So fades a summer cloud away;
So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;
So gently shuts the eye of day;
So dies a wave along the shore.

But whether on the scaffold high,
Or in the battle's van,

Country. Act II. Sc. 2*.

14
We must all die!
All leave ourselves, it matters not where, when,
Nor how, so we die well; and can that man that does so
Need lamentation for him?
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER—*Valentinian. Act
IV. Sc. 4*.

How shocking must thy summons be, O Death!
To him that is at ease in his possessions:
Who, counting on long years of pleasure here,
Is quite unfurnish'd for that world to come!
BLAIR—The Grave. L. 350.

Sure 'tis a serious thing to die! My soul!
What a strange moment must it be, when, near Thy journey's end, thou hast the gulf in view!
That awful gulf, no mortal e'er repass'd
To tell what's doing on the other side.

Man that is born of a woman hath but a short time to live, and is full of misery. He cometh up, and is cut down, like a flower; he fleeth as it were a shadow, and never continueth in one stay.
Book of Common Prayer. Burial of the Dead.
Quoted from Job. XIV. 1.

In the midst of life we are in death.
Book of Common Prayer. Burial of the Dead.
Media vita in morte sumus. From a Latin an-tiphon. Found in the choirbook of the monks of St. Gall. Said to have been composed by NOTKER ("The Stammerer") in 911, while watching some workmen building a bridge at Martinsbrücke, in peril of their lives. LUTHER's anti-phon "De Morte." Hymn XVIII is taken from this.

1
 'Mid youth and song, feasting and carnival,
 Through laughter, through the roses, as of old
 Comes Death, on shadowy and relentless feet
 Death, unappeasable by prayer or gold;
 Death is the end, the end.
 Proud, then, clear-eyed and laughing, go to greet
 Death as a friend!

RUPERT BROOKE—Second Best.

2
 Oh! death will find me, long before I tire

<sup>13</sup> Some men make a womanish complaint that it is a great misfortune to die before our time. I would ask what time? Is it that of Nature? But she, indeed, has lent us life, as we do a sum of money, only no certain day is fixed for payment.
What reason then to complain if she demands it at pleasure, since it was on this condition that you received it.

The sun is rising—let us go.

DECEMBER

- 1
Only the sea intoning,
Only the wainscot-mouse,
Only the wild wind moaning
Over the lonely house.
T. B. ALDRICH—December, 1863.
- 2

Our fathers, trod the desert land.

4
Shout now! The months with loud acclaim,
Take up the cry and send it forth;
May breathing sweet her Spring perfumes,
November thundering from the North.

They join their notes in grand accord;
Hail to December! say they all,
It gave to Earth our Christ the Lord!

Never, never petting
About the frozen time right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own Governments, for the rights

The world must be made safe for democracy.
Its peace must be planted upon the tested foundations of political liberty. We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure as the faith and the freedom of nations can make them.

I call'd the devil, and he came,

He talks quite glibly of church and state.

More they proceed the more they still disjoin.

DOCTRINE

For his religion, it was fit
To match his learning and his wit;
'Twas Presbyterian true blue;
For he was of that stubborn crew
Of errant saints, whom all men grant
To be the true Church Militant;
Such as do build their faith upon
The holy text of pike and gun;
Decide all controversies by Infallible artillery;
And prove their doctrine orthodox,
By Apostolic blows and knocks.

BUTLER—Hudibras. Pt. I. Canto I. L. 189.

3 O how far remov'd,
Predestination! is thy foot from such
As see not the First Cause entire: and ye,
O mortal men! be wary how ye judge:
For we, who see the Maker, know not yet
The number of the chosen; and esteem
Such scantiness of knowledge our delight:
For all our good is, in that primal good,
Concentrate; and God's will and ours are one.

Is it a fact—or have I dreamt it—that by means of electricity, the world of matter has become a great nerve, vibrating thousands of miles in a breathless point of time? If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home.

Oh, to be in England,
Now that April's there,

MARTIAL—Epigrams. Bk. X. Ep. 54.

MARTIAL—Epigrams. Bk. XI. Ep. 42.

<sup>16</sup> And have you been able, Flaccus, to see the slender Thais? Then, Flaccus, I suspect you can see what is invisible.

I came at morn—'twas spring, I smiled,
The fields with green were clad;
I walked abroad at noon,—and lo!

I sate me down; 'twas autumn eve,
And I with sadness wept;
I laid me down at night, and then
'Twas winter,—and I slept.

Death is the common Press, from whence being driven,
We're gather'd, Sheet by Sheet, and bound for Heaven.

EVENING

11 At the close of the day, when the hamlet is still
And mortals the sweets of forgetfulness prove,
When nought but the torrent is heard on the hill
And nought but the nightingale's song in the grove.

JAMES BEATTIE—Hermit.

12 And whiter grows the foam,
The small moon lightens more;
And as I turn me home,

But seemed far beautifuller than its day.

14 Hath thy heart within thee burned,
At evening's calm and holy hour?
S. G. BULFINCH—Meditation.

15 It is the hour when from the boughs
The nightingale's high note is heard;
It is the hour when lovers' vows
Seem sweet in every whispered word;
And gentle winds, and waters near,
Make music to the lonely ear.
Each flower the dews have lightly wet,
And in the sky the stars are met,
And on the wave is deeper blue,
And on the leaf a browner hue,
And in the heaven that clear obscure,
So softly dark, and darkly pure.
Which follows the decline of day,
As twilight melts beneath the moon away.
BYRON—Parisina. St. 1.

16 When day is done, and clouds are low,
And flowers are honey-dew,

And homeward wing the turtle-doves,
Then comes the hour the poet loves.
GEORGE CROLY—The Poet's Hour.

17 The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,

22 Now came still evening on; and twilight gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad:

FAIRIES

- 12 Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We daren't go a-hunting
For fear of little men;
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together,
Green jacket, red cap,
And white owl's feather!

- 14 When the first baby laughed for the first time,

all went skipping about. That was the beginning of fairies.
BARRIE—Peter Pan.
- 15 Whenever a child says "I don't believe in fairies" there's a little fairy somewhere that falls right down dead.
BARRIE—Peter Pan.
- 16 Bright Eyes, Light Eyes! Daughter of a Fay!
I had not been a married wife a twelvemonth and a day,
I had not nursed my little one a month upon my
knee,
When down among the blue bell banks rose elfins three times three:
They griped me by the raven hair, I could not cry for fear,
They put a hempen rope around my waist and dragged me here;
They made me sit and give thee suck as mortal mothers can,
Bright Eyes, Light Eyes! strange and weak and wan!

FAITH

Mahomet made the people believe that he would call a hill to him, and from the top of it offer up his prayers for the observers of his law. The people assembled; Mahomet called the hill to come to him, again and again, and when the hill stood still, he was never a whit abashed, but said, if the hill will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the hill.

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise,
(That last infirmity of noble mind)
To scorn delights, and live laborious days;

Comes the blind Fury with th' abhorred shears,
And slits the thin-spun life.

And then go hence; for, see, the night is fair,
The stars rejoice to watch thee on thy way.
Third Poem in Bard of the Dimboritza: Rumanian Folksongs. Collected by HÉLÈNE VACARESCO. English by CARMEN SYLVA and ALMA STRETTELL. (Quoted by GALS-WORTHY, on fly leaf of The Dark Flower.)

<sup>16</sup>
As for marigolds, poppies, hollyhocks, and valorous sunflowers, we shall never have a garden without them, both for their own sake, and for the sake of old-fashioned folks, who used to love them.

HENRY WARD BEECHER—Star Papers. A Discourse of Flowers.

<sup>17</sup>
Flowers have an expression of countenance as much as men or animals. Some seem to smile; some have a sad expression; some are pensive and diffident; others again are plain, honest and upright, like the broad-faced sunflower and the hollyhock.

HENRY WARD BEECHER—Star Papers. A Discourse of Flowers.

Flowers are Love's truest language; they betray, Like the divining rods of Magi old,
Where precious wealth lies buried, not of gold,
But love—strong love, that never can decay!
PARK BENJAMIN—Sonnet. Flowers, Love's Truest Language.

<sup>19</sup>
Thick on the woodland floor
Gay company shall be,
Primrose and Hyacinth
And frail Anemone,

Perennial Strawberry-bloom,
Woodsorrel's pencilled veil,
Dishevel'd Willow-weed
And Orchis purple and pale.
ROBERT BRIDGES—Idle Flowers.

I have loved flowers that fade,
Within whose magic tents
Rich hues have marriage made
With sweet unmemoried scents.

Brazen helm of daffodillies,
With a glitter toward the light.
Purple violets for the mouth,
Breathing perfumes west and south;
And a sword of flashing lilies,
Holden ready for the fight.
E. B. BROWNING—Hector in the Garden.

Ah, ah, Cytherea! Adonis is dead.
She wept tear after tear, with the blood which was shed,—
And both turned into flowers for the earth's garden-close;
Her tears, to the wind-flower,—his blood, to the rose.
E. B. BROWNING—Lament for Adonis. St. 6.

The flower-girl's prayer to buy roses and pinks,
Held out in the smoke, like stars by day.
E. B. BROWNING—The Soul's Travelling.

Yet here's eglantine,
Here's ivy!—take them as I used to do Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine.
Instruct thine eyes to keep their colours true,
And tell thy soul their roots are left in mine.
E. B. BROWNING—Trans. from the Portuguese.
XLIV.

The windflower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the brier-rose and the orchis died amid the summer glow;
But on the hills the golden-rod, and the aster in the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook, in autumn beauty stood,
Till fell the frost from the clear cold heaven, as falls the plague on men,
And the brightness of their smile was gone, from upland glade and glen.
BRYANT—Death of the Flowers.

Where fall the tears of love the rose appears,
And where the ground is bright with friendship's

Forget-me-not, and violets, heavenly blue,
Spring glittering with the cheerful drops like dew.

Mourn, little harebells, o'er the lea;
Ye stately foxgloves fair to see!
Ye woodbines, hanging bonnilie
In scented bowers!
Ye roses on your thorny tree
The first o' flow'rs.
BURNS—Elegy on Capt. Matthew Henderson.

Now blooms the lily by the bank,

The snowdrop and primrose our woodlands

12
Rose, what is become of thy delicate hue?
And where is the violet's beautiful blue?
Does aught of its sweetness the blossom beguile?
That meadow, those daisies, why do they not smile?
JOHN BYROM—A Pastoral. St. 8.

13
Ye field flowers! the gardens eclipse you 'tis true:
Yet wildings of nature, I dote upon you,
For ye waft me to summers of old,
When the earth teem'd around me with fairy delight,
And when daisies and buttercups gladden'd my sight,
Like treasures of silver and gold.
CAMPBELL—Field Flowers.

The berries of the brier rose
Have lost their rounded pride:
The bitter-sweet chrysanthemums
Are drooping heavy-eyed.
ALICE CARY—Faded Leaves.

I know not which I love the most,
Nor which the comeliest shows,
The timid, bashful violet
Or the royal-hearted rose:

The pansy in her purple dress,
The pink with cheek of red,
Or the faint, fair heliotrope, who hangs,
Like a bashful maid her head.
PHEBE CARY—Spring Flowers.

16
They know the time to go!
The fairy clocks strike their inaudible hour

Bows at the signal an obedient head
And hastes to bed.

Of purple, shall adorn thy dells;
The wallflower, on each rifted rock,
From liberal blossoms shall breathe down,

Its fragrance; while the hollyhock,
The pink, and the carnation vie
With lupin and with lavender,
To decorate the fading year;
And larkspurs, many-hued, shall drive
Gloom from the groves, where red leaves lie,

Of Pan we sing, the best of leaders Pan,

Hear, O you groves, and hills resound his worth.

Nam pro jucundis aptissima quæque dabunt di,

Janus am I; oldest of potentates!
Forward I look and backward and below
I count—as god of avenues and gates—
The years that through my portals come and go.
I block the roads and drift the fields with snow,
I chase the wild-fowl from the frozen fen;
My frosts congeal the rivers in their flow,
My fires light up the hearths and hearts of men.

diffused.

Dum homo est infirmus, tunc deos, tunc hominem esse se meminit: invidet nemini, neminem miratur, neminem despiciat, ac ne sermonibus quidem malignis aut attendit, aut alitur.

When a man is laboring under the pain of any distemper, it is then that he recollects there are gods, and that he himself is but a man; no mortal is then the object of his envy, his admiration, or his contempt, and having no malice to gratify, the tales of slander excite not his attention.

A glimpse of Breidablick, whose walls are light
As e'en the silver on the cliff it shone;
Of dark blue steel its columns azure height
And the big altar was one agate stone.
It seemed as if the air upheld alone
Its dome, unless supporting spirits bore it,
Studded with stars Odin's spangled throne,
A light inscrutable burned fiercely o'er it;
In sky-blue mantles,
Sat the gold-crowned gods before it.

Atlas, we read in ancient song,
Was so exceeding tall and strong,

Just as the pedler does his pack;
But, as the pedler overpress'd
Unloads upon a stall to rest,
Or, when he can no longer stand,
Desires a friend to lend a hand,
So Atlas, lest the ponderous spheres
Should sink, and fall about his ears,
Got Hercules to bear the pile,
That he might sit and rest awhile.

Nature lies disheveled, pale,
With her feverish lips apart,—
Day by day the pulses fail,

Quick thou comest, strong and free,
Type of all the wealth to be,— Goldenrod!

Of the various executive abilities, no one excited more anxious concern than that of placing the interests of our fellow-citizens in the hands of honest men, with understanding sufficient for their stations. No duty is at the same time more difficult to fulfill. The knowledge of character possessed by a single individual is of necessity limited. To seek out the best through the whole Union, we must resort to the information which from the best of men, acting disinterestedly and with the purest motives, is sometimes incorrect.

That this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN—Speech at Gettysburg. 1863. The phrase "of the people, for the people and by the people" is not original with Lincoln. There is a tradition that the phrase, "The Bible shall be for the government of the people, for the people and by the people," appears in the preface of the Wyclif Bible of 1384, or in the Hereford Bible, or in a pamphlet of the period treating of that version. See Notes and Queries, Feb. 12, 1916. P. 127. Albert Mathews, of Boston, examined the reprint of 1850 of the Wyclif Bible, and finds no reference to it. There is a preface to the Old and the New Testament, and a prologue to each book, probably written by John Purvey. There is what I call the American idea. * * *
This idea demands, as the proximate organization thereof, a democracy,—that is, a government of all the people, by all the people, for all the people; of course, a government of the principles of eternal justice, the unchanging law of God; for shortness' sake I will call it the idea of Freedom.

THEODORE PARKER—Speech at the N. E. Anti-Slavery Convention. Boston, May 29, 1850.

16
First there is the democratic idea: that all men are endowed by their creator with certain natural rights; that these rights are alienable only by the possessor thereof; that they are equal in men; that government is to organize these natural, unalienable and equal rights into institutions designed for the good of the governed, and therefore government is to be of all the people, by all the people, and for all the people. Here government is development, not exploitation.

10
The little wind that hardly shook
The silver of the sleeping brook
Blew the gold hair about her eyes,—
A mystery of mysteries.
So he must often pause, and stoop,
And all the wanton ringlets loop
Behind her dainty ear—emprise
Of slow event and many sighs.
W. D. HOWELLS—Through the Meadow.

11
My mother bids me bind my hair
With bands of rosy hue,
Tie up my sleeves with ribbands rare,
And lace my bodice blue;

For why, she cries, sit still and weep,
While others dance and play?
Alas, I scarce can go or creep,
While Rubin is away.

Pt. VI. L. 375.

You manufacture, with the aid of unguents, a false head of hair, and your bald and dirty skull is covered with dyed locks. There is no need to have a hairdresser for your head. A sponge, Phœbus, would do the business better.
MARTIAL—Epigrams. Bk. VI. Ep. 57.

15
You collect your straggling hairs on each side, Marinus, endeavoring to conceal the vast expanse of your shining bald pate by the locks which still grow on your temples. But the hairs disperse, and return to their own place with every gust of wind; flanking your bare poll on either side with crude tufts. We might imagine we saw Hermeros of Cydas standing between Speudophorus and Telesphorus. Why not confess yourself an old man? Be content to seem what you really are,
and let the barber shave off the rest of your hair.
There is nothing more contemptible than a bald man who pretends to have hair.

MARTIAL—Epigrams. Bk. X. Ep. 83.

POPE—Rape of the Lock. Canto III. L. 37.

21
Then cease, bright nymph! to mourn thy ravish'd hair
Which adds new glory to the shining sphere;
Not all the tresses that fair head can boast
Shall draw such envy as the lock you lost,
For after all the murders of your eye,
When, after millions slain, yourself shall die;

When those fair suns shall set, as set they must,
And all those tresses shall be laid in dust,
This Lock the Muse shall consecrate to fame,
And 'midst the stars inscribe Belinda's name.

HAPPINESS

10 Hold him alone truly fortunate who has ended his life in happy well-being.

ÆSCHYLUS—Agamemnon. 928.

11 'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago,
Tall and slender, and sallow and dry;
His form was bent, and his gait was slow,
His long thin hair was white as snow,
But a wonderful twinkle shone in his eye.
And he sang every night as he went to bed,
"Let us be happy down here below;
The living should live, though the dead be dead,"
Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

But still more do I love to wander away
To the meadow so sweet,
Where down at my feet,
The harebell blooms modest and tender.

DORA READ GOODALE—Queen Harebell.

With drooping bells of clearest blue
Thou didst attract my childish view,
Almost resembling
The azure butterflies that flew
Where on the heath thy blossoms grew
So lightly trembling.

BISHOP HEBER—The Harebell.

Simplest of blossoms! To mine eye
Thou bring'st the summer's painted sky;
The May-thorn greening in the nook;
The minnows sporting in the brook;
The bleat of flocks; the breath of flowers;
The song of birds amid the bowers;
The crystal of the azure seas;
The music of the southern breeze;
And, over all, the blessed sun,
Telling of halcyon days begun.

MOORE—The Harebell.

High in the clefts of the rock 'mid the cedars
Hangeth the harebell the waterfall nigh;
Blue are its petals, deep-blue tinged with purple,
Mystical tintings that mirror the sky.

whatever it may be, is in itself nothing—makes nothing, goes for nothing; but, be sure of it, everything in life depends upon the cock of the hat." For how many men—we put it to your own experience, reader—have made their way through the thronging crowds that beset fortune, not by the innate worth and excellence of their hats, but simply, as Sampson Piebald has it, by "the cock of their hats"? "The cock's all."

the brain a little, its light goes out, followed by

Esse voluptatem liquidam puramque relinquit.

The dreadful fear of hell is to be driven out, which disturbs the life of man and renders it

A dungeon horrible, on all sides round,
As one great furnace, flamed; yet from those flames
No light, but rather darkness visible
Serv'd only to discover sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace
And rest can never dwell, hope never comes
That comes to all; but torture without end.

1 Facilis descensus Averno est;
Noctes atque dies patet atri janua Ditis;
Sed revocare gradum, superasque evadere ad
auras,
Hoc opus, hic labor est.

Easy is the descent to Lake Avernus (mouth of Hades); night and day the gate of gloomy Dis (god of Hades) is open; but to retrace one's steps, and escape to the upper air, this indeed is a task; this indeed is a toil.

VERGIL—Æneid. VI. 26. ("Averni" in some editions.)

2 In the throat
Of Hell, before the very vestibule
Of opening Orcus, sit Remorse and Grief,
And pale Disease, and sad Old Age and Fear,
And Hunger that persuades to crime, and Want:
Forms terrible to see. Suffering and Death
Inhabit here, and Death's own brother Sleep;
And the mind's evil lusts and deadly War,
Lie at the threshold, and the iron beds
Of the Eumenides; and Discord wild
Her viper-locks with bloody fillets bound.

3 In the deepest pits of 'Eil,
Where the worst defaulters dwell

But you can't expect the burning to admire 'em!

7 The foolish oft-times teach the wise:
I strain too much this string of life, belike,
Meaning to make such music as shall save.
Mine eyes are dim now that they see the truth,
My strength is waned now that my need is most;
Would that I had such help as man must have,
For I shall die, whose life was all men's hope.

I shall not live in vain.

Quasi lumen de suo lumine accendit, facit:
Nihilominus ipsi luceat, cum illi accenderit.

O Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum,
Wie treu sind deine Blätter.
Du grünst nicht nur zur Sommerzeit,
Nein, auch im Winter wenn es schneet,
O Tannenbaum, O Tannenbaum,
Wie treu sind deine Blätter.
O hemlock-tree! O hemlock-tree! how faith-

Green not alone in summer time,
But in the winter's frost and rime!

HEN

Alas! my child, where is the Pen
That can do justice to the Hen?
Like Royalty, she goes her way,
Laying foundations every day,
Though not for Public Buildings, yet
For Custard, Cake and Omelette.
Or if too old for such a use
They have their fling at some abus'
As when to censure Plays Unfit
Upon the stage they make a Hit
Or at elections seal the Fate
Of an Obnoxious Candidate.
No wonder, Child, we prize the Hen,
Whose Egg is Mightier than the Pen.
OLIVER HERFORD—The Hen.

HOLIDAYS

The second day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore.

JOHN ADAMS—Letter to Mrs. Adams. July 3, 1776.

There were his young barbarians all at play
There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire, Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday.

BYRON—Childe Harold. Canto IV. St. 141.

<sup>9</sup>
And that was the way
The deuce was to pay
As it always is, at the close of the day
That gave us—

Hurray! Hurray! Hurray!

(With some restrictions, the fault-finders say)
That which, please God, we will keep for aye
Our National Independence!

WILL CARLETON—How We Kept the Day.

The holiest of all holidays are those Kept by ourselves in silence and apart;
The secret anniversaries of the heart,
When the full river of feeling overflows;—
The happy days unclouded to their close;
The sudden joys that out of darkness start
As flames from ashes; swift desires that dart
Like swallows singing down each wind that blows!

To number Ave-Maries on his beads;

His weapons holy saw of sacred writ,

Are brazen images of canonized saints.

Henry VI. Pt. II. Act I. Sc. 3. L. 58.

He who the sword of heaven will bear
Should be as holy as severe;
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and virtue go;
More or less to others paying
Than by self-offences weighing.
Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!

That still displayed their melancholy hue;
Save the green holly with its berries red,
And the green moss that o'er the gravel spread.

<sup>6</sup>
And as, when all the summer trees are seen
So bright and green,

Less bright than they,
But when the bare and wintry woods we see,
What then so cheerful as the Holly-tree?
SOUTHEY—The Holly-Tree.

<sup>7</sup>

IMMORTALITY (See also DEATH)

It must be so—Plato, thou reasonest well!—
Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire,
This longing after immortality?
Or whence this secret dread, and inward horror,
Of falling into nought? Why shrinks the soul
Back on herself, and startles at destruction?
'Tis the divinity that stirs within us;
'Tis heaven itself, that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man.
ADDISON—Cato. Act V. Sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup>
The stars shall fade away, the sun himself
Grow dim with age, and nature sink in years,
But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth,
Unhurt amidst the wars of elements,
The wrecks of matter, and the crush of worlds.
ADDISON—Cato. Act V. Sc. 1.

No, no! The energy of life may be Kept on after the grave, but not begun;
And he who flagg'd not in the earthly strife,
From strength to strength advancing—only he
His soul well-knit, and all his battles won,
Mounts, and that hardly, to eternal life.
MATTHEW ARNOLD—Sonnet. Immortality.

On the cold cheek of Death smiles and roses are blending,
And beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.

Fish say, they have their Stream and Pond;
But is there anything Beyond?
RUPERT BROOKE—Heaven.

There is nothing strictly immortal, but immortality. Whatever hath no beginning may be confident of no end.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE—Hydriotaphia. Ch. V.

<sup>9</sup>
If I stoop
Into a dark tremendous sea of cloud,
It is but for a time; I press God's lamp
Close to my breast; its splendor soon or late that the cessation of the evidence of existence is necessarily evidence of the cessation of existence.

A name which before thee no mortal hath won.

In babyhood.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON—At Last. St. 6.

Of such as he was, there be few on earth;
Of such as he is, there are few in Heaven:

And Heaven is all the happier that he's there.

Tamque opus exegi quod nec Jovis ira nec ignis

And now have I finished a work which neither the wrath of Jove, nor fire, nor steel, nor all-consuming time can destroy. Wel-

Thy lord shall never die, the whiles this verse
Shall live, and surely it shall live for ever:
For ever it shall live, and shall rehearse
His worthy praise, and virtues dying never,

And thou thyself herein shalt also live;
Such grace the heavens doe to my verses give.

3 When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

INDIAN PIPE

Monotropa unguis

13 Pale, mournful flower, that hidest in shade
Mid dewy damps and murky glade,
With moss and mould,
Why dost thou hang thy ghastly head,
So sad and cold?

CATHERINE E. BEECHER—To the Monotropa, or Ghost Flower.

Where the shadows cool lie dreaming,
Pale the Indian pipes are gleaming—
Laugh, O murmuring Spring!

SARAH F. DAVIS—Summer Song.

15 I hear, I hear
The twang of harps, the leap
Of fairy feet and know the revel's ripe,
While like a coral stripe
The lizard cool doth creep,
Monster, but monarch there, up the pale Indian Pipe.

CHARLES DE KAY—Arcana Sylvarum.

16 Death in the wood,—
In the death-pale lips apart;
Death in a whiteness that curdled the blood,
Now black to the very heart:

The wonder by her was formed
Who stands supreme in power;
To show that life by the spirit comes
She gave us a soulless flower!

And, in his mantle muffing, up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

What we have inherited from our fathers and mothers is not all that 'walks in us.' There are all sorts of dead ideas and lifeless old beliefs.
They have no tangibility, but they haunt us all the same and we can not get rid of them. Whenever I take up a newspaper I seem to see Ghosts gliding between the lines. Ghosts must be all over the country, as thick as the sands of the sea.

INN, TAVERN

19
You may go to Carlisle's and to Almack's too;
And I'll give you my Head if you find such a Host,
For Coffee, Tea, Chocolate, Butter, or Toast;
How he welcomes at once all the World and his Wife,

And how civil to Folks he ne'er saw in his Life.
ANSTREY—New Bath Guide. Fourth Ed. (1767)
P. 130. Phrase "the world and his wife" also found in SWIFT—Polite Conversation. Third Dialogue. Another version "All the world and Little Billing." A parish in Northamptonshire.

20
He who has not been at a tavern knows not what a paradise it is. O holy tavern! O miraculous tavern!—holy, because no carking cares are there, nor weariness, nor pain; and miraculous, because of the spits, which themselves turn round and round!

ARETINO—Quoted by Longfellow in Hyperion.
Bk. III. Ch. II.

21
He had scarcely gone a short league, when Fortune, that was conducting his affairs from good to better, discovered to him the road, where he also espied an Inn. Sancho positively maintained it was an Inn, and his master that it was a castle; and the dispute lasted so long that they arrived there before it was determined.
CERVANTES—Don Quixote. Pt. I. Ch. XV.

Now musing o'er the changing scene
Farmers behind the tavern screen
Collect; with elbows idly press'd
On hob, reclines the corner's guest,
Reading the news to mark again
The bankrupt lists or price of grain.
Puffing the while his red-tipt pipe
He dreams o'er troubles nearly ripe,
Yet, winter's leisure to regale,
Hopes better times, and sips his ale.
CLARE—Shepherd's Calendar.

Along the varying road of life,
In calm content, in toil or strife,
At morn or noon, by night or day,

Et l'audace impunie enfle trop un courage.
He who allows himself to be insulted deserves to be so; and insolence, if unpunished, increases!

No sacred fane requires us to submit to insult.
GOETHE—Torquato Tasso. III. 3. 191.

Injuriae qui addideris contumeliam?
What wilt thou do to thyself, who hast added insult to injury?

- 6
The hand that follows intellect can achieve.
MICHAEL ANGELO—The Artist. LONGFELLOW's trans.
- 7
In short, intelligence, considered in what seems to be its original feature, is the faculty of manufacturing artificial objects, especially tools to make tools, and of indefinitely urging the manufacture.
HENRI BERGSON—Creative Evolution. Ch. II.
- 8
Instinct perfected is a faculty of using and even constructing organized instruments; intelligence perfected is the faculty of making and using unorganized instruments.
HENRI BERGSON—Creative Evolution. Ch. II.

For the eye of the intellect "sees in all objects what it brought with it the means of seeing."
CARLYLE—Varnhagen Von Ense's Memoirs. London and Westminster Review. 1838.
(See also CARLYLE under EYES)
- 10
The growth of the intellect is spontaneous in every expansion. The mind that grows could not predict the times, the means, the mode of that spontaneity. God enters by a private door into every individual.

'Tis good-will makes intelligence.

LONGFELLOW—Hyperion. Bk. I. Ch. VIII.

A man is not a wall, whose stones are crushed upon the road; or a pipe, whose fragments are thrown away at a street corner. The fragments of an intellect are always good.

Went sounding on, a dim and perilous way!
WORDSWORTH—Excursion. Bk. III.
- 18
Three sleepless nights I passed in sounding on,
Through words and things, a dim and perilous way.
WORDSWORTH—Borderers. Written eighteen years before Excursion.

INTEMPERANCE (See also DRINKING, WINE)

- 19
Beware the deadly fumes of that insane elation
Which rises from the cup of mad impiety,
And go, get drunk with that divine intoxication
Which is more sober far than all sobriety.
WM. R. ALGER—Oriental Poetry. The Sober Drunkenness.
- 20
Man, being reasonable, must get drunk;
The best of life is but intoxication:
Glory, the grape, love, gold, in these are sunk
The hopes of all men and of every nation;
Without their sap, how branchless were the trunk
Of life's strange tree, so fruitful on occasion:
But to return,—Get very drunk; and when
You wake with headache, you shall see what then.
BYRON—Don Juan. Canto II. St. 179.

INTENTION (See MOTIVE)

INVENTION

1 A tool is but the extension of a man's hand, and a machine is but a complex tool. And he that invents a machine augments the power of a man and the well-being of mankind.

HENRY WARD BEECHER—Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit. Business.

2 Se non è vero è ben trovato.

It is not true, it is a happy invention.

GIORDANO BRUNO—Gli Proci Furori. Attributed erroneously to CARDINAL D'ESTE. Quoted in PASQUIER Recherches (1600) as "Si cela n'est vray, il est bien trouve."

3 Want, the mistress of invention.

MRS. CENTILVRE—The Busy Body. Act I. Sc. 1.

4 The golden hour of invention must terminate like other hours, and when the man of genius returns to the cares, the duties, the vexations, and the amusements of life, his companions behold him as one of themselves—the creature of habits and infirmities.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI—Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. XVI.

5 God hath made man upright; but they have sought out many inventions.
Ecclesiastes. VII. 29.

IRELAND

15 There came to the beach a poor exile of Erin,

* * * * *
But the day star attracted his eyes' sad devotion,
For it rose o'er his own native isle of the ocean,
Where once in the fire of his youthful emotion
He sang the bold anthem of Erin-go-bragh.
CAMPBELL—The Exile of Erin.

16 There's a dear little plant that grows in our isle,
'Twas St. Patrick himself sure that set it;
And the sun on his labor with pleasure did smile,
And with dew from his eye often wet it.
It thrives through the bog, through the brake,
and the mireland;
And he called it the dear little shamrock of Ireland—
The sweet little shamrock, the dear little shamrock,
The sweet little, green little, shamrock of Ireland!
ANDREW CHERRY—Green little Shamrock of Ireland.

17 Dear Erin, how sweetly thy green bosom rises!
An emerald set in the ring of the sea.
Each blade of thy meadows my faithful heart prizes,
Thou queen of the west, the world's cushla ma chree.
JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN—Cushla ma Chree.

18 When Erin first rose from the dark-swelling flood,
God blessed the green island, he saw it was good.
The Emerald of Europe, it sparkled and shone
In the ring of this world, the most precious stone.
WILLIAM DRENNAN—Erin. Supposed to be origin of term "Emerald Isle." Phrase taken from an old song, "Erin to her own Tune." (1795)

19 Arm of Erin, prove strong, but be gentle as brave,
And, uplifted to strike, still be ready to save;
Nor one feeling of vengeance presume to defile
The cause or the men of the Emerald Isle.
WILLIAM DRENNAN—Erin.

Old Dublin City there is no doubtin'
Bates every city upon the say.
'Tis there you'd hear O'Connell spoutin'
And Lady Morgan making tay.

With charmin' pisintry upon a fruitful sod,
Fightin' like devils for conciliation,
And hatin' each other for the Love of God.
CHARLES J. LEVER. Attributed to him in

Th' an'am an Dhia, but there it is—
The dawn on the hills of Ireland.

O Ireland, isn't it grand, you look
Like a bride in her rich adornin',
And with all the pent up love of my heart
I bid you the top of the morning.
JOHN LOCKE—The Exile's Return.

There is a stone there,

JACKDAW

1
The Jackdaw sat in the Cardinal's chair!
Bishop and Abbot and Prior were there,
Many a monk and many a friar,
Many a knight and many a squire,
With a great many more of lesser degree,—
In sooth a goodly company;
And they served the Lord Primate on bended
knee.

Never, I ween,
Was a prouder seen,
Read of in books or dreamt of in dreams,
Than the Cardinal Lord Archbishop of Rheims.
R. H. BARHAM—Ingoldsby Legends. The Jackdaw of Rheims.

2
An old miser kept a tame jackdaw, that used to steal pieces of money, and hide them in a hole, which a cat observing, asked, "Why he would hoard up those round shining things that he could make no use of?" "Why," said the jackdaw, "my master has a whole chestfull, and makes no more use of them than I do."

JANUARY

3 Janus was invoked at the commencement of most actions; even in the worship of the other gods the votary began by offering wine and incense to Janus. The first month in the year was named from him; and under the title of Matu-tinus he was regarded as the opener of the day.
Hence he had charge of the gates of Heaven, and hence, too, all gates, Januae, were called after him, and supposed to be under his care.
Hence, perhaps, it was, that he was represented with a staff and key, and that he was named the Opener (Patulcius), and the Shutter (Clusius).

JASMINE

Jasminum

5
And at my silent window-sill
The jessamine peeps in.
BRYANT—The Hunter's Serenade.

6
Jasmine is sweet, and has many loves.
HOOD—Flowers.

Jas in the Arab language is despair,
And Min the darkest meaning of a lie.
Thus cried the Jessamine among the flowers,
How justly doth a lie
Draw on its head despair!

Among the fragrant spirits of the bowers
The boldest and the strongest still was I.
Although so fair,
Therefore from Heaven
A stronger perfume unto me was given
Than any blossom of the summer hours.
LELAND—Jessamine.

8
Among the flowers no perfume is like mine;
That which is best in me comes from within.
So those in this world who would rise and shine
Should seek internal excellence to win.
And though 'tis true that falsehood and despair
Meet in my name, yet bear it still in mind
That where they meet they perish. All is fair
When they are gone and nought remains behind.

LELAND—Jessamine.

9
And the jasmine flower in her fair young breast, (O the faint, sweet smell of that jasmine flower!)

And the one bird singing alone to his nest.

And the one star over the tower.

OWEN MEREDITH (Lord Lytton)—Aux Ital-iens. St. 13.

10
It smelt so faint, and it smelt so sweet,
It made me creep and it made me cold.

Like the scent that steals from the crumbling sheet

Where a mummy is half unroll'd.

iens.*

What, is the jay more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful?

JEALOUSY

13
The damning tho't stuck in my throat and cut me like a knife,
That she, whom all my life I'd loved, should be another's wife.

H. G. BELL—The Uncle. Written for and recited by HENRY IRVING.

14

sight of their objects than love.

GEORGE ELIOT—*The Mill on the Floss. Bk.
I. Ch. X.*

16
Jealousy is never satisfied with anything short of an omniscience that would detect the subtlest fold of the heart.

GEORGE ELIOT—*The Mill on the Floss. Bk.
VI. Ch. X.*

17
Then grew a wrinkle on fair Venus' brow,
The amber sweet of love is turn'd to gall!
Gloomy was Heaven; bright Phœbus did avow
He would be coy, and would not love at all!

Swearing no greater mischief could be wrought,
Than love united to a jealous thought.

ROBERT GREENE—Jealousy.

1 Jealousy is said to be the offspring of Love.
Yet, unless the parent makes haste to strangle the child, the child will not rest till it has poisoned the parent.

As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy

OTHELLO. Act III. Sc. 3. L. 146.

12 O, beware, my lord of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on; that cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!
OTHELLO. Act III. Sc. 3. L. 166. ("Fondly

13 Trifles light as air

14 But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous.

17 But through the heart
Should Jealousy its venom once diffuse,

My suit has nothing to do with the assault,

to him; but you, with swelling words and extravagant gestures, dilate on the Battle of Cannæ, the Mithridatic war, and the perjuries

JULY

 The linden, in the fervors of July,
 Hums with a louder concert. When the wind
 Sweeps the broad forest in its summer prime,
 As when some master-hand exulting sweeps
 The keys of some great organ, ye give forth
 The music of the woodland depths, a hymn
 Of gladness and of thanks.

BRYANT—Among the Trees. L. 62.

 Loud is the summer's busy song
 The smallest breeze can find a tongue,

JUNE

Do you recall that night in June
Upon the Danube River;
We listened to the ländler-tune,
We watched the moonbeams quiver.
CHARLES H. AIDÉ—Danube River.

<sup>2</sup>
I gazed upon the glorious sky
And the green mountains round,
And thought that when I came to lie
At rest within the ground,
'Twere pleasant, that in flowery June,
When brooks send up a cheerful tune,
And groves a joyous sound,
The sexton's hand, my grave to make,
The rich, green mountain-turf should break.
BRYANT—June.

<sup>3</sup>
What joy have I in June's return?
My feet are parched—my eyeballs burn,
I scent no flowery gust;
But faint the flagging Zephyr springs,
With dry Macadam on its wings,
And turns me "dust to dust."
HOOD—Town and Country. Ode Imitated from Horace.

<sup>4</sup>
June falls asleep upon her bier of flowers;
In vain are dewdrops sprinkled o'er her,
In vain would fond winds fan her back to life,
Her hours are numbered on the floral dial.
LUCY LARCOM—Death of June. L. 1.

<sup>5</sup>
And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.
LOWELL—The Vision of Sir Launfal.

<sup>6</sup>
So sweet, so sweet the roses in their blowing,
So sweet the daffodils, so fair to see;
So blithe and gay the humming-bird a-going
From flower to flower, a-hunting with the bee.
NORA PERRY—In June.

<sup>7</sup>
It is the month of June,
The month of leaves and roses,
When pleasant sights salute the eyes
And pleasant scents the noses.

Justice is itself the great standing policy of civil society; and any eminent departure from it, under any circumstances, lies under the suspi-

BURKE—Reflections on the Revolution in France.

<sup>13</sup>
It looks to me to be narrow and pedantic to apply the ordinary ideas of criminal justice to

My youthful limbs I wont to lave;
No torrents stain thy limpid source,
No rocks impede thy dimpling course,
That sweetly warbles o'er its bed,
With white, round, polish'd pebbles spread.
SMOLLETT—Ode to Leven Water.

Shall I say to Cæsar
What you require of him? for he partly begs

To lean upon.

Let us do or die.

BURNS—Bruce to His Men at Bannockburn.

4
Eternal Spirit of the chainless Mind!
Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou art,
For there thy habitation is the heart—
The heart which love of thee alone can bind;
And when thy sons to fetters are consign'd—
To fetters and damp vault's dayless gloom,
Their country conquers with their martyrdom.
BYRON—Sonnet. Introductory to Prisoner of Chillon.

5
When Liberty from Greece withdrew,
And o'er the Adriatic flew,
To where the Tiber pours his urn,
She struck the rude Tarpeian rock;
Sparks were kindled by the shock—
Again thy fires began to burn.
HENRY F. CARY—Power of Eloquence.

6

As so often before, liberty has been wounded in the house of its friends. Liberty in the wild and freakish hands of fanatics has once more, as frequently in the past, proved the effective helpmate of autocracy and the twin-brother of tyranny.
OTTO KAHN—Speech at University of Wisconsin. Jan. 14, 1918.

20
The deadliest foe of democracy is not autocracy but liberty frenzied. Liberty is not foolproof. For its beneficent working it demands self-restraint, a sane and clear recognition of the practical and attainable, and of the fact that there are laws of nature which are beyond our power to change.
OTTO KAHN—Speech at University of Wisconsin. Jan. 14, 1918.

Justly thou abhorr'st
That son, who on the quiet state of men
Such trouble brought, affecting to subdue
Rational liberty; yet know withal,
Since thy original lapse, true liberty
Is lost.

That place that does contain
My books, the best companions, is to me
A glorious court, where hourly I converse
With the old sages and philosophers;
And sometimes, for variety, I confer
With kings and emperors, and weigh their counsels;

Calling their victories, if unjustly got,
Unto a strict account, and, in my fancy,
Deface their ill-placed statues.
